

The Museum celebrates its 25th birthday at the Montefiore

As the Sydney Jewish Museum celebrates its 25th anniversary year, we find it important to honour the past volunteers and members who helped build and strengthen the Museum from its early days in 1992. The Museum visits the Montefiore Home in Randwick four times a year to ensure these connections are maintained and nurtured.

Together with the residents at the home, we celebrate birthdays throughout the year and bring exciting news of what's happening at the Museum and our latest events and exhibitions. Taking the time to speak with our pivotal founding members and community influencers, Museum staff and volunteers enjoy catching up on all things politics, current events at the Museum and around the world!

We often welcome new faces at our morning teas and learn about their associations with the Museum. Whilst getting to know everyone, we find ourselves learning about people's lives and their unique journeys to Australia.

Entering its 26th year, the Sydney Jewish Museum continues to explore the stories and ongoing relevance of the Holocaust, and the rich contribution that the survivors and founding members have made to the Museum and to contemporary Australian life.
